Hero In The Workplace: A Complete Guide To Managing Your Property In An Emergency

Synopsis

Attention: Property Managers, Chief Engineers, and Maintenance Supervisors - and anyone else tasked with protecting property - this book is for you! "Hero at the Workplace" is an in depth and practical guide that will empower you to shine whenever a water, fire, mold, or storm emergency hits. Disasters are going to happen, this much is certain. The question is, how prepared are you to handle them? Jonathan Fish, owner of National Water Restoration, has been dealing with disaster-type situations all of his life. In this book he teaches how to be effectively prepared so that you can confidently manage any and all disastrous situations, big or small, from beginning to end. Being prepared for disaster begins long before it happens while the effects of the disaster linger through continued work with contractors and insurance companies long after. Learn from a true expert on how to navigate this difficult situation and minimize the stress it typically causes individuals and companies going through it. You will find yourself in a crisis caused by water, fire, mold, or because of a storm. The damages caused by water, fire, mold, or storm often leave families in crisis. Mishandling these high-cost and time sensitive emergencies have been the cause for many people to lose their jobs. Hero's naturally have the wisdom to make sound decisions. Read this book. Be the hero.

Customer Reviews

I read this book and it's a wonderful guide for property managers, engineers and even landlords. I highlighted the book in all different sections and feel very prepared in case of a water, fire, storm or mold emergency. I highly recommend this read and believe it would be very helpful to all property managers!
